In 1983, General Motors Corporation entered into a Conciliation Agreement resolving the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's (EEOC's) 1973 charge of discrimination against General Motors and the United Auto Workers. The provision of the agreement endowed specified colleges and universities with funds to be used to provide scholarships in perpetuity for minority and female employees of General Motors and their eligible spouses and offspring. Under General Motors Corporation's educational endowment and grants program, scholarship funds are made available annually to meet their designated purpose.
